To whom it may concern,

As the Operations and Creative Manager at the Social Learning Project, I have managed Andres Aranguibel during his Graphic Design internship. During his time here, Andres was responsible for various projects.

Andres is an Emerging Graphics and Graphic Design major, and thus contributed much to the look and feel of our website. He was responsible for a site redesign project, starting with a revamp of our home page followed by the rest of our site. Andres demonstrated proficiency in Adobe Photoshop and After Effects, creating numerous icons, buttons, and web elements in general. He also created a promotional video for us, even with time constraints and changes in visual direction.
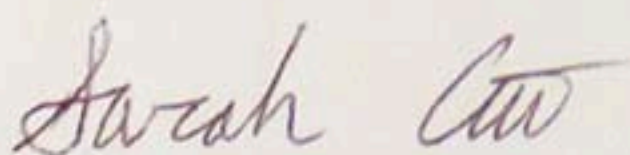

Site redesign isn't a solo project, and Andres worked well with his fellow interns. He contributed graphics and rearranged the site layout while working with content created by others. He built on his web design skills and also worked with our development intern for user experience design on our learning management system's theme/interface. He is quick to revise his work based on feedback and handles constructive criticism in a way that helps him grow.

As a startup company, it is important for members of the team to be versatile. Andres learned how to work with Joomla, the content management system (CMS) for our website, and worked with HTML and CSS. When it comes to design, Andres is dependable and often assists with projects that have tight deadlines. He is quick to suggest new things, such as creating infographics to share on social media.

Andres Aranguibel is eager to learn and has a positive work attitude. He is enthusiastic about graphic design, and I recommend him for any design position in your company.

Feel free to contact me by phone or email for more information.

Sincerely,

Sarah Cao
